

I strongly believe alkyl nitrites should not be included in the Poisons Schedule. The evidence of their risks is both weak and equivocal, but they have had a significant positive impact in the marginalised LGBT community. Instead, they should be regulated so people don't have to access them from unreliable sources, and information and support provided about potential risks and safer use so they can make informed choices.