

FUTURE REGULATION OF 'LOW RISK' PRODUCTS UNDER THERAPEUTIC GOODS ADMINISTRATION: KEEP HOMEOPATHY REGULATED THE WAY IT IS NOW.

My concern is that homeopathic treatments being excluded or not available for the Australian consumers under the future regulation of "low Risk" products mentioned on page 46-49 on the consultation paper.

I would like to see that the option 1. Keep Homeopathy regulated the way it is. This would benefit many others in the community I know that they are getting help from Homeopathy as well. Please consider that there are many things that the old fashioned medical testing cannot touch but doing more research to help prove that Homeopathy works is good. However, taking the optional and alternative medication away from the community is pushing the poor consumer on to the hands of the mega chemical and pharmaceutical companies who would gobble up them.

Myself and my family get this treatment since we lived in UK in the 1980's and New Zealand in the 1990's. Forcing the decisions made by a group of allopathic doctors on the consumers is unfair. World-wide reports are available that are contrary to the reports being accepted or followed by some experts. I am a living example that if there was no Homeopathic medicines were not available that I would be dead by now. Allopathic medicine which predicted dependent on expensive allopathic medicine for me for the rest of the life in the 1990's has been untrue with the help of Homeopathic medicine. I did not need those chemicals prescribed by the surgeon (who carried out an unnecessary brain surgery on me at the Prince Alfred Hospital -Sydney and then hid all my medical files within a week so there will be no evidence to prove that) since I had homeopathic treatment in the 1990's.

Please consider leaving homeopathy regulated the way it is.
