

TGA Consultation on Homeopathic Remedies

I request OPTION 1

Homeopathic medicine is recognised in many countries as a therapeutic medicine. Millions of people around the world use homeopathy. Homeopathy is included in the NHS of a number of countries.

Why did the TGA cite a UK government review in their consultation paper that was subsequently rejected by the UK government?

The Australian NHMRC report, I have heard, set a standard to assess Homeopathy on that was much higher than standards they and the TGA themselves use to assess effectiveness of other modalities.

There are many Homeopathic trials that have been accepted as effective clinically around the world albeit they may not fit in to the Criteria that the NHMRC set namely population greater than 150.

I choose option 1 as I want the TGA to treat and regard Homeopathic Medicines as Therapeutic such that the rigour of the TGA is used to keep the Homeopathic remedies and their production at top quality.
