

To whom it may concern

Regarding the TGA and homeopathy, I believe the TGA needs to leave homeopathy alone. In my opinion, the TGA really needs to look into regulating other far more dangerous pharmaceutical practices and medication.

Homeopathy is a useful form of treatment for many health issues. It has been around since the mid 1800s. It is a safe practice which has worked well for me and my family. As I have had adverse reactions to many antibiotics and medication prescribed by general practitioners, and there is a history of severe vaccine reaction in my family, I opted to use this safe treatment over 2 decades ago, which has proven to be very beneficial for my health and that of my family. We have never had an adverse reaction to the homeopathic treatments we have used.

I strongly object to a government body taking away the freedom to choose how I wish to look after my health and that of my family. I have studied many forms of healthcare and if I choose homeopathy to treat myself or my family then that is my human right as a citizen living in Australia. I urge the TGA to opt for option 1 or possibly 2, and leave homeopathy alone.

Kind regards,
