

I am registering this submission to the TGA about the proposed changes to the regulations regarding Homeopathic medicine and drugs.

Homeopathy is recognised by the World Health Organization (WHO) as the most popular and widely used complementary medicine worldwide. Entire communities depend on it for healthcare and the prevention of epidemic disease. That being so, why would the TGA consider restricting the access of Australians to it?

Why does the TGA draw from a report (NHMRC report) being investigated for complaints of serious irregularities (conflicts of interest, bias and absence of fairness etc.) while ignoring other report (Swiss report) which conclude that “There is sufficient evidence for the preclinical effectiveness in the clinical efficacy of homeopathy and for its safety and economy compared with conventional treatment.”

My family having directly received beneficial homeopathic treatment, I personally knows of the benefits.

Please keep homeopathy regulated the way it is.

Regards,

A solid black rectangular box used to redact the sender's name and contact information.