

Consumers and users of homeopathy (including me), do not want:

Self-help information about homeopathy and the symptoms and ailments it treats, restricted.

Homeopathic prescribers to be stopped from providing that information, or prescribing homeopathic remedies.

Regulations designed for high-risk medicines applied to homeopathy which, by the TGA's own description, is a "low-risk" medicine.

Consumer and user access to homeopathic remedies restricted.

Changes to the regulations that would inhibit, restrict, or deny the importation, exportation, or manufacture of homeopathic remedies by homeopathic manufacturers and pharmacies.

Changes in the current regulations that would either encourage or make it easier for those antagonistic to homeopathy to lodge vexatious complaints.

For the above reasons, Option 4 of the consultation should not be adopted.

As a consumer I would like to choose option 1

Option 1 – Keep homeopathy regulated the way it is.

Regards,

Simone Ingle